Fred Cottrell focuses his practice on various areas of litigation, with an emphasis on intellectual property, antitrust, products liability, and commercial law. Head of Richards Layton's Intellectual Property Group, Fred represents parties in significant IP litigation before the United States District Court for the District of Delaware and in Delaware state courts.

Chambers notes Fred's "good instincts and excellent service" and praises his "phenomenal knowledge of the judges and courts" (Chambers USA, 2018). A prominent figure in Delaware District Court practice and intellectual property law in Delaware, Fred has spoken at numerous seminars in his fields of practice, including at the Federal Circuit Bar Association on the use of injunctions in patent cases and at the ABA spring meeting on judicially assisted ADR. He has also been a frequent speaker on Delaware District Court practice. Fred recently moderated a panel addressing the impact of the Heartland decision on Delaware District Court litigation at the 2018 ABA Intellectual Property Law Conference.

Fred is currently the chair of the Complex Commercial Litigation Division Advisory Committee for the Delaware Superior Court and past co-chair of the Delaware District Court's IP Advisory Committee.
